

ANNE KASPRIK - BIOGRAPHY

Anne Kasprik was born and raised in East Berlin. Her father, a film director, and her mother, a photographer, both provided that she got in touch with film and theater as early as childhood. She started acting in a high school play group. Keen on following her father's footsteps, Anne Kasprik began to learn and work as a practitioner at the GDR Television with the intention of becoming a director. Her education included training at the Ernst Busch Actors Academy. There her teachers soon noticed her outstanding dramatic talent and suggested that she focus on it. Anne Kasprik went by this advice. The first result of her decision is the film EINZUG INS PARADIES of 1982/83, where she plays the main role. Many more were to follow in films produced by the East German movie production Defa, and GDR Television, e.g. in the very popular STAATSANWALT and POLIZEIRUF 110 series, where she worked with well-known directors like Manfred Mosblech and – for the first time – under her father's direction. She also played at various theaters, e.g. the Hans-Otto-Theater in Potsdam and Berlin's Maxim-Gorki-Theater, where she appeared under Thomas Langhoff's direction in A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM. After 1989 Anne Kasprik continued her career with the female lead in the film EINES TAGES IRGENDWANN, directed by Vadim Glowna. She has since been a successful actress in unified Germany, appearing in films like the much-praised BARMHERZIGE SCHWESTERN, the ZDF-four-part-feature DAS EUREKA-PROJEKT, the EINSATZ FÜR LOHBECK series, various TATORT and other tv-crimers, and as a permanent member of an inner city police crew in RTL's successful BERLIN ABSCHNITT 40, only recently awarded as Best European Fictional Series in Monaco. Anne Kasprik's first international engagement was the role of a Berlin animal doctor siding Bud Spencer and Terence Hill in their film TROUBLEMAKERS, shot 1994 in New Mexico. In the German-American co-production THE GANG she was Uwe Ochsenknecht's partner. Both films were produced in English.
